

Combs impressed by media accepting his many names

Rapper Sean Combs is impressed with the media for being able to keep track of his numerous names because no other celeb has been able to do so.

Contactmusic.com reports that Combs has tried out a combination of names for his personal and business life. Most recently he wanted the 'P' to be dropped from his latest nickname P. Diddy. He also doesn't think it is too important about his name changes because other celebs are still trying to make the press take their name changes seriously.

He said: 'I do take pride in being able to successfully change my name and having the media actually change my name in print. Prince, he wasn't able to do it. Garth Brooks, he wasn't able to do it. I think I'm the only person that has successfully been able to do it, and I just have fun with it. It is confusing on Google though. Because I would probably be higher up on Google ranks if I just had one name.'
