EmaarMGF, a joint venture between the United Arab Emirates (UAE)-based real estate giant Emaar Properties and India's MGF Developments, will showcase its Indian projects at a three-day event called 'Indiascapes' starting here Monday.

The showcase in Dubai will give Indian expatriates in the UAE an opportunity to buy the joint venture's properties in India, according to an EmaarMGF statement.

There are around 1.5 million expatriate Indians in the UAE.

"We remain committed towards making a difference to the Indian lifestyle with our master-planned integrated townships," EmaarMGF chief executive Bill Rattazzi said in the statement.

"Significantly, Emaar Properties' competencies in developing iconic structures globally is now visible in the Indian real estate landscape through EmaarMGF's projects. This provides UAE customers an opportunity to own developments that are benchmarked against the best in the world," he added.

EmaarMGF is building a series of integrated master-planned townships across a number of Indian cities like Hyderabad, Chennai, Gurgaon and Mohali.

The joint venture is also building the athletes' village for the 2010 Commonwealth Games in New Delhi.
