

Radcliffe compares new Potter movie to 'Trainspotting'

'Harry Potter' star Daniel Radcliffe is comparing the upcoming Harry Potter movie to the Scottish film 'Trainspotting'.

TheSun.co.uk reports that Radcliffe feels that 'Harry Potter and the Half-Blood Prince' looks like 'Trainspotting' in a few places.

Radcliffe said: 'There's a fair amount of sexual energy and drug parallels. We have a couple of 'Trainspotting' moments. That's two films I never thought would be mentioned in the same breath.'

Director David Yates said: 'We're opening with a big attack. We'll bring a major London landmark crashing down.'
