

IBN Network ties up with Bond film 'Quantum of Solace'

India's IBN Network has tied up with the distributors of the next James Bond movie "Quantum of Solace" to run a contest and telecast an interview with lead actor Daniel Craig.

The network will bring a host of shows on the British super spy like special features on the movie, the legacy and history of Bond movies and an interview with Craig and director Marc Foster conducted by the network's English wing Entertainment Editor Rajeev Masand.

"A new Bond movie is always much awaited by millions of fans around the world and with 'Quantum of Solace' all set to release worldwide, we are bringing special programming that will take an in-depth look at the phenomena," IBN network Editor-in Chief Rajdeep Sardesai said in a statement here Wednesday.

The network is also running a contest hosted on <http://007.in.com> that invites viewers to send a question that they would like to ask the actor.

Masand will put two chosen questions to Craig during the interview while other participants can win passes to the Indian premiere of the film, movie merchandise and tickets.

The movie releases in India Nov 7.
