

Amalric wanted to be director, not actor

French actor Mathieu Amalric doesn't care about winning awards because he cares more about being a director.

According to contactmusic.com, Amalric explains that he got into acting by chance and still cannot believe that he has won three Cesar acting awards.

Speaking to a magazine, he says: 'Me, a guy who never thought of being an actor, I have three. It's stupid. The real me is a director. In April (09), I'm going to stop acting and direct another film.'

Amalric plays the villain in the new Bond movie 'Quantum Of Solace'.
