

Rihanna vents emotions through latest album

Singer Rihanna has revealed that she has vented her emotions following her break-up with singer Chris Brown through her latest album 'Rated R'.

'The feelings that I went through and exactly what was going through my mind and how I felt...I really vented on this album and as I said before, all of it isn't about that specific relationship or what I went through, because that's not who I am,' said Rihanna.

'This album is an expression of all those feelings that I went through in the last eight months, just different emotions,' the singer was quoted as saying by contactmusic.com.

The 'Russian Roulette' singer had broken up with Brown after he assaulted her following a pre-Grammy party in February.

However, the 21-year-old Rihanna is keen to make clear the album isn't just a compilation of 'dark' tracks.

'All of it isn't angry, all of it isn't dark and sad because I didn't go through that the whole time. That was part of it. It was really a roller coaster and you get that when you will listen to the album,' she said.
