

Malini Ramani presents sunshine Colors New Delhi - Living in the sunny state of Goa has influenced Malini Ramani's creativity with touches of happiness and lots of colour. Her collection titled "The Party" was full of sunshine in a line up of bright colours. From "Brunch" to "Sunset" and "After Party", Malini wove her magic on a collection of garments, which by Malini Ramani standards could be called very sober and conservative but very practical in look and style. Malini's "Brunch" opened with vibrant acid green and melon for pleated georgette tunics gleaming with mirror work. Then a shocker "so typical of Malini" with a Lycra striped sequined bikini and then on to those styles that everyone could slip into. So there was a sun yellow track suit with appliqué, cotton Lycra lace tube dress, and the current favourite "a hoodie with a green butterfly mini. Onto "Sunset" and the colour palette changed to burnt sienna, orange, and the styles were a little sexier as a Swarovski bead encrusted tube dress with satin capris brought in touches of the Old Malini Ramani. For those on the conservative side an orange sequined leheria kurta and matching crepe silk pants would be good sellers and for those with the figure that can score a perfect ten "it was a cowl neck jumpsuit in knit with braided gold belt. "After Party" glamour was restricted to shades of rose, cream and olive but surprisingly on a very subdued tone. A stylish appliqué leather jacket had dazzling sequined paisley pants in beige cotton Lycra. Quilted jackets, a tie and dye velvet waist coat were for those cool nights on the beach while a chiffon layered dress, rose lycra cowl dress and chiffon crêpe skirt with tie dye lycra top created the glamour with style and pizzazz. Malini Ramani's collection for a day on INDIVA island (her imaginary version) proved that when a designer dreams she can create some practical clothes for ultra modern women.
