

Huffman misses overwhelmed mother's role

Felicity Huffman, the award winning actress of 'Desperate Housewives', misses playing the overwhelmed mother Lynette Scavo in the latest series.

In the latest instalment, Lynette (Huffman) features as a glamorous career woman. But Huffman feels she preferred her character's original image because it represented everyday common problems that come with parenting.

Contactmusic.com quoted her as saying: 'I wanted an example of motherhood that addressed the madness, depression, rage, loss, wonder and love. I do regret we've moved on from that because it's so true - and there aren't many examples of it on TV. But I think a year of playing an overwhelmed mother is enough.'
