

Victoria's Secret model rubbishes anorexia reports

International lingerie brand Victoria's Secret model Jaslene Gonzalez has slammed reports that she was suffering from eating disorders.

The Latino model says she is not anorexic and has no problems with her skinny frame, contactmusic.com reported.

She writes: 'Anorexia is a sickness that I do NOT tolerate in my life. Just because I'm a model doesn't mean that I am going to starve myself. I am happy with who and what I am. I don't have low self-esteem to go and starve myself to think that I look good.'

'I will say that there are many models who have gone through that hardship and I really feel sorry for them. I love myself for who I am. There is nothing in this world that can change that.'
