

Cruise's United Artists debut film to open LA fest

Hollywood superstar Tom Cruise's first movie under his new United Artists (UA) moniker, 'Lions For Lambs', has been selected to open the upcoming AFI Los Angeles International Film Festival.

Directed by Robert Redford, 'Lions For Lambs', which is a political thriller, is the first production for the new-look United Artists. It will premiere at the film festival Nov 1. It also stars Redford and Meryl Streep, reports contactmusic.com

The movie mogul became a partner in UA last year after he was unceremoniously dumped by Paramount boss Sumner Redstone over public comments he made about Scientology.
