

Graphiti School of Animation announces 6-month specialization course

Graphiti School of Animation has just announced a 6-month specialization course. For those who came in late, Graphiti School of Animation is the brain-child of Mr. Ram Mohan (Father of Indian Animation) and is aligned to Graphiti Multimedia.

Already into its second year, the School has already made a mark in the industry with its first batch of students who have got plum postings in leading animation studios. According to the heads of studios employing Graphiti School students, "There is a marked difference in quality - the students are well-rounded animation professionals with their basics in place."

The 6-month specialization is targeted primarily at people who have some knowledge of animation and are looking for honing their skills or furthering their careers.

The specializations are Modelling, Texturing, Rigging, Animation, Lighting and Compositing.

Registrations for the course have already begun, but according to Mr. Pandyan, CEO, Graphiti School of Animation, "Given the nature of the course, we have only limited seats going".
